I - TRANSLATION

Building a stronger economic union

Speaking to the European Parliament about decisions made on 8-9 December by EU leaders, Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso stated that the decision by 26 out of 27 governments on a new intergovernmental treaty setting tighter budget rules showed their readiness to move ahead with further European integration.

The treaty would require governments to keep their general budgets balanced or in surplus. Those who exceed a deficit gap of 0.5% of GDP would have to bring their budgets back into balance under the oversight of the Commission and other EU countries.

Governments are expected to sign the treaty in March 2012. It is seen as an important part of the EU's response to the financial crisis – and the eurozone's debt crisis.

This response includes:

- 6 measures to improve budget monitoring and help control public debt: in force from 13 December 2011;
- a 2012 growth survey: recommendations on growth, job creation and public finances to start the annual 6-month cycle during which governments get the input of EU peers as they formulate their budgetary and economic policies; and
- bringing forward the creation of the EU's permanent bailout fund to July 2012 (the current temporary fund will continue until mid-2013).

EU leaders will decide soon on whether to provide the IMF with up to €200bn more to help debt-stricken eurozone countries.

In March 2012 they will discuss ways to further budget coordination and examine a proposal to allow the eurozone to collectively issue bonds.

II – ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS

2.1. – What is the content of the decision made at the European Council on the 8th and 9th of December last year? What steps will be taken so this decision comes into force?

2.2. – Which are in your opinion the most appropriate measures in order to reach the budgetary balance in Spain?
